

WHAT PEOPLE ARE SAYING ABOUT THE VALUES DECK...

I love your values cards. My daughter and I went on a little cruise for her birthday and I took the cards to share with her. It was great to see the values my daughter already knows about herself and our conversation gave me a better understanding of her.

I also found a value I had not really recognized in myself: "responsibility." I am such a responsible person and have little tolerance for others who do not show this value. Now that I can acknowledge my value around responsibility, I'm hoping to be able to let go of my attachment to it when others don't show it.

I already loaned the deck to a co-worker working on values and have ordered more so I can share them with others.

As a coach, I take my clients through a values exercise as part of creating awareness about their foundation. Using the Values Cards makes this process more fun and thorough.

I even carry the cards with me when I am traveling and have used them with people I meet- and one person even hired me after we completed a short exercise using the Values Cards.

Thanks Margie for creating these.

I had an initial coaching session last week with a highly technical engineer who spoke volumes about his products and his organizational vision. I was despairing of ever seeing the man behind the business mask, when I pulled out your Resilience Values Deck.

He immediately sorted the cards calling the exercise both interesting and hard. When I asked him to cluster his most important values and tell me about them, I saw a whole new man. His face turned red, tears sprang to his eyes, and he talked about what is most important in his life. Your cards completely turned around the coaching session and cleared a path to important life challenges that the client is facing and what he might want to address in future sessions.

Thank you for helping me move this engineer from his head to his heart where the real work of coaching can happen.
